

Applications are invited for the post of Global Health Associate Editor

The Role – Global Health Associate Editor BMJ Case Reports

BMJ Case Reports is launching a call for global health associate editors. We are looking for students and junior doctors in their internship years who will work with our editorial team on producing educational resources for medical students and junior doctors. These will include images to learn from, as well as clinical and global health cases and videos. In addition, there will be the opportunity to contribute to our blog, work with the editorial team on research projects, run writing workshops and attend medical events and conferences to promote initiatives in global health.

Full editorial support and training will be provided. The editor should expect to spend two hours in total each week on journal-related activities. This post is unpaid.

About BMJ Case Reports

BMJ Case Reports is an important educational resource offering a high volume of cases in all disciplines so that healthcare professionals, researchers and others can easily find clinically important information on common and rare conditions. We are the largest resource of clinical cases and the only publisher of global health cases. These cases focus on the social determinants of health and access to healthcare of patients from all over the world.

About BMJ

BMJ advances healthcare worldwide by sharing knowledge and expertise to improve health experiences and outcomes. Along with our world renowned flagship title, The BMJ, we also offer over 60 specialty journals. BMJ Case Reports is one of these journals and publishes clinical and global health cases, images and videos.

To apply

All interested students and interns should submit a global health case report. Candidates will be selected from accepted case reports and called for interview in October 2017. The submission deadline is the 30th of September. We welcome applicants from all over the world.
